Comment: What an absurdity that the biodiversity can be bought off and money paid to the council offices in lieu of real reinstatement of lost habitat. How does that help the neighbours regain what has been stolen from us? I would strongly suggest the planning office visit the site and see for themselves how this tree line in just 12 months has recovered from the devastation of this developer's wanton destruction of a tree line that we can prove was there prior to WW2. It would take another 30 years to get back to where it was. But please stop these people from hacking back what is already a remarkable come back.

There is also the issue of the boundary which is not being addressed.

The development is too big and does not sit well with the architecture within the area. I strongly object.
