This architectural elevation drawing shows a building facade with several distinct features. The central portion of the facade is a light gray wall. On the left side of this central section, there is a small, light gray rectangular structure labeled '1.' which contains a square window labeled '3.'. To the right of this structure, there is a vertical glass door. Above the door and the '1.' structure, there are two rectangular windows stacked vertically. The top portion of the facade is a light blue wall. On the left side of this blue section, there is a square window labeled '6.'. To the right of this window, there is a small, square, brick-textured structure labeled '2.' which contains a square window. The entire facade is set against a dark gray ground plane.
